BRYAN ASKS POWERS TO RESPECT CHINA'S NEUTRALITY

Washington, Aug. 10.—The first diplomatic move made by the United States outside of offering good offices to warring European nations, developed today when it became known that Secretary of State Bryan addressed a note to all the powers designated to insure respect for the neutrality of China.

The note requests that there be no occupation of Chinese territory; that her neutrality be respected, and that area hostilities there be localized to colonies of Europeans.

Mr. Bryan's aims are to prevent anti-foreign outbreaks in China and avoid injury to neutral commerce. The only foreign guards at Peking now are United States and Japanese soldiers. Should Japan become involved in war it would leave the United States to protect foreigners.

MAN CHARGED WITH PERJURY

Henry Johnson of near Moccasin, is arrested following Wood-Underwood litigation in Chancery Court.

Charged with perjury, Henry Johnson, who lives near Moccasin, and who was a witness in the Wood-Underwood suit on trial some time ago in the Chancery Court, was arrested Saturday by Deputy Sheriff Henry Nichols and locked in the Houston county jail.

The man was arrested on the complaint of W. O. Williams, who has brought the perjury charges. The charges follow the Wood-Underwood trial in which the various heirs were suing for about $12,000 which was left by a Mrs. Wood.

Johnson was a witness at the hearing in the Chancery Court, and it is now claimed that he gave false testimony. He had not made bond this morning.

The Wood-Underwood litigation created much interest several months ago.

Graceville Men Caught Under Car

When the automobile in which he was riding turned upside down in the road several miles south of Dothan late Sunday afternoon, Percy Deal, of Graceville, Fla., had a narrow escape from death. It is said that he was painfully injured when pinned underneath the car. It is reported that Deal went to turn out of the road with his auto-

PASTOR ROASTS OFFICERS FOR INACTIVITY

Dr. H. H. McNeill blames lack of Law Enforcement for Existing Conditions.—Severely Criticizes Modern Inances.

Charging that lack of law enforcement was responsible for a condition of lawlessness in this community, and placing the responsibility directly upon officers of the law, including the sheriff, mayor, probate judge and police, Dr. H. H. McNeill preached a sermon Sunday morning that was heard by a large congregation.

The pastor reiterated his former statements in which he said he believed the burning of the parsonage was the work of blind tigers. He charged the general condition of affairs to the officers, whom he said would not enforce the law.

The action of Probate Judge A. C. Crawford in recently discharging nine defendants held on charges of violating the prohibition laws, was severely criticised. The defendants were discharged following habeas corpus proceedings, the judge ruling that they were illegally restrained of their liberties.

The speaker said that Leftie Louis and Gyp the Blood were gunmen, but that it was not on record where they ever set a house occupied by women and children on fire.

"The people will never have law enforcement in Houston county as long as they have a probate judge who says 'I'll be damned if one of them shall go to jail,'"—evidently meaning the nine men charged with violating the prohibition laws—and a sheriff who curses the circuit judge when he issues orders to him, and lawyers who will resort to every trick known to the shyster."

Roasts Dancing.—"If you mothers look on dancing and see what I saw the other night and call it beautiful, I'll read your hearts to the bottom," said the minister in his sermon last night. He said the old-time dances that were in vogue among the Southern aristocracy years ago were beautiful.

mobile to let E. R. Porter and party of Dothan pass, when the accident took place. Mr. Porter stopped his car and tried to get Mr. Deal to come to Dothan for medical treatment but he refused and joined another party in an automobile. LAST SAD RITES PAID MRS. WILSON

Washington, Aug. 10.—A gentle simplicity which ran like a silver thread through her life, marked the last rites every paid Mrs. Wilson. The Presbyterian ritual was used and about two hundred close friends and congressional committees were present. Services were held in the East room. Pall bearers were the White House policemen whose friend ship she had gained. There was no singing. A special train this afternoon took the body to Rome, Ga., for burial, from a church of which her father was pastor for years.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN AND THE LIQUOR QUESTION

The recent passing on of Right Honorable Joseph Chamberlain, one of England's greatest statesmen, recalls to mind some of his notable utterances on the liquor problem. Speaking in Birmingham in 1875, he said: "Temperance reform lies at the bottom of all further political, social and religious reform. The enemies of strong drink are the friends of mankind."

In 1878, in the Fortnightly Review, he said, "The continued spread of intemperance is the most important single cause of the misery and suffering still rife in our midst, and there are few who would not gain by the assertion of Mr. Cobden, made many years back, that for strong drink, he said: "If the temperance cause lies at the foundation of all social and political reform. This fact has indeed become so apparent to those engaged in any kind of public, religious or philanthropic work, that earnest men find it impossible to rest and be thankful, and even professional optimists confess the hopelessness of repose while this hateful pest is present to disturb the tender of calm, and there are few who would not gain by the assertion of Mr. Cobden, made many years back, that for strong drink, he said: "If the temperance cause lies at the foundation of all social and political reform. HUMAN LIFE LINE FORMER TO SAVE DOTHAN COUPLE FROM DROWNING SUNDAY

It was only through the heroic efforts of these men, who quickly formed a line that the lives of T. A. Ward the manager of the Atlantic Compress Company of this city, and Mrs. Ward, were saved from drowning in the surf off Land's End, just south of Panama City, Sunday afternoon.

Caught in Whirlpool.—Mr. and Mrs. Ward, in entering the surf had gone west of the safety line, not knowing that the recent storm had washed out great quantities of sand, causing something like a whirlpool, and a greatly augmented underflow. The couple had been in the water possibly an hour when in quick succession, bearing them to the west and out to the Gulf, Mr. Ward, who is a good swimmer, had been holding his wife with his right arm, and when they were both borne out to deeper water, and Mrs. Ward had sunk, the former's right arm was so numb from having been in one position so long that it was useless.

Try For Help.—Finding that he could not rescue his wife with his left arm, Mr. Ward came to the surface and cried for help. People seemed dazed for a few minutes, and then several started to form a line from shore by holding hands. Suddenly two men, who were about the middle of the chain, broke and went to shore; others plunged in the surf and after the line was again formed, the two in danger were brought to the beach, and with heroic work of Dr. G. H. Hodges of Marianna, and others, they were resuscitated in about half an hour.

Young Man Overcome.—Daniel H. Stubbs, a young man of Demopolis, who is visiting friends in Marianna, and formed member of the Marianna party on the beach, was among the first to to the Ward's rescue, but having within the past few weeks been resuscitated from the hospital, where he had suffered a case of pneumonia, was overcome, and it was half an hour after the resuscitation of Mr. Ward that he was in condition to be brought to the bath house.

First to Aid Couple.—Engineer W. D. Livingston, of Dothan, of the Hay Low road, was the first to reach Mrs. Ward, and he was immediately joined by Cleveland Newberry of Panama City, and H. L. Gideon of Troy, who with others, formed the line to the shore. In the rescue of Mr. Ward, a young man in a red bathing suit, whose name could not be learned, plunged in and was quickly joined by U. E. Stephens of Dothan, and Francis McKinnon of Marianna, the latter a fifteen-year-old lad, and others. Young McKinnon showed unusual bravery and did his part equally as well, if not better, than many of the men who so ably assisted in the rescue. Another one of the rescuers who deserves special mention for his courage and good work was R. L. Daffs, of Marianna.

Perpetual of Self.—When Mr. Livingston first reached the Wards, the wife, forgetful of self, before making pushed her head toward Mr. Livingston, doubtless feeling that if only one could be saved, she would rather sacrifice herself than have her husband die.

The Dothan party reached home last night, and fortunately Mr. and Mrs. Ward, it is believed, will sustain no permanent injury by reason of their harrowing experience. Mr. Stubbs came with the party as far as Cotteville, and although very weak, Dr. Hodges was of the opinion that no ill consequences would follow his heroic work.

Crowd Prevents Marriage Ceremony

Blinded by a crowd of curious spectators, Miss Annie Griffin and Houghton Lynn, of Ashford, were not married at the court house yesterday afternoon as they had planned. Judge Crawford was going to perform the ceremony, but he didn't. Suspecting that something out of the ordinary was about to take place, a crowd gathered at the court house, this causing the couple to postpone the ceremony.

The marriage license was issued, however, and no doubt the happy but embarrassed couple succeeded in having the ceremony performed somewhere, far from the mad-dancing town comprehending them.

Miss Gertrude Holt Weds Earl Gales

Mr. Earl Gales has returned from Montgomery with his bride, who was Miss Gertrude Holt, and who will be remembered as a trap drummer of ability at local theatres.

The ceremony was performed on July 31, and since that time Mr. Gales and his wife have been living in Montgomery, occupying the home they spent in LaOrange, Ga. Mrs. Gales has accepted a position as trap drummer at the State Theatre. Mr. Gales is supposed to be a successful business man, having the ceremony performed most. Their many friends here elsewhere, far from the mad-dancing town comprehending them.

THE OWL.

Memphis Commercial Appeal.

One of the wind storms of last week blew a little, shivering owl out of the river lowgrounds into the heart of the city.

A variable wall it was, bewildered and confused; in its owl way, no doubt, astonished at the lights and the strange sounds of the brilliant, jarring streets.

"Temperamented," as it was, it found no "best of Fallow" in which to perch, as did Poe's raven when whirled through the poet's opened shutter. But the owl's "city of refuge" was a huge elm tree that spread its branches at the juncture of streets and alleys. Sparrows haunted its green shadows, and a dark-devil blue jay had built her nest high on a swaying limb. Instinctively the owl sought here a resting place; and, off and on, thru the stillness of the night, it sent out its quivering cry for its mate: "Who-who?"

That no insignificant visitor should create a neighborhood sensation seemed out of the question. But the corners of the alley traced their forlorn path back to the jungle or cool reaches of the dark continent, and though all else of national origin is forgotten, superstition clings like a leech and the first cry of that stranded owl sent shivers of dread down human spines.

Mourning found a grave and anxious company gathered under the elm tree, scanning its leafy recesses of the ill-omened intruder, while speculation ran riot as to whom the bird had come "to call." For in the vernacular of their belief, when an owl "shivers" about a house "somebody's going to die."

"It didn't come for me," said one dusky maiden, "for I got right up when it hollered and threw some ash over my left shoulder."

"Nor for me," said another, "for I walked backwards across the room three times in the dark without making anything, and that's a good way."

"Well, I'm safe," said a third. "I turned back of my sham bed-curtain on the doorstep seen as I was the first who—"

And the old maidens and gossips who sat on the little owl was located and "chucked" out of the street and sent upon a blinded flight for another hiding place, while the company dispersed to set up a system of watchful waiting to determine who would be the victim of the "call."

We laugh at the ignorance that makes the scared, wind-blown owl a prophet of evil. And yet in every heart is there not a strain of superstition? In even the wisest among us free from the finger-marks of some latent secret dread? We refuse to confess it, but subconsciously we hesitate in the face of exclaimed "omen," or stay our hands from certain acts on certain days because into the ear of our fancy there was whispered a queer story of potency for evil.

Each walk of life has its own superstitions. The farmer plants his seed at certain phases of the moon; the fisherman benches forever the boat that has "drowned its owner;" the woodchopper burns no bonfires on his hearthstone; the hunter shoots the jay bird that carries sand to the devil; the seamstress cuts out no garment on a Friday; the country boy makes a cross-mark and spins in it if a rabbit crosses his path. And so on and on we might go through the long category.

We are all of us tarred with the old stick of evil presages. We laugh and deny it, even to our selves but in one form or another the stranded owl comes to us all, and all of us follow the time-honored rules of throwing salt, walking backward in the dark or turning up the soles of our shoes on the threshold. There are all but symbols, typifying something in our own lives. We laugh at one superstition while in our hearts we harbor another. None of us is beyond the reach of uncanny beliefs, or the influence of "signs" and portents.

Yes, verily, wise or otherwise, every heart has its wind-blown owl with its unanswered cry of "who-who?"

MORE QUESTIONS ABOUT YOUR LOCAL SCHOOLS.

1. Have you voted a local tax? You can never have the sort of schools you ought to have until you do.

2. Have you consolidated with any other school district? Two to two and one-half miles is not too much for the children farthest from school—provided they get a decidedly better school by it, as they can do by consolidation.

3. Have you a school library? If not, get one.

4. Is the schoolhouse painted, adorned with worthy pictures, and the grounds ample and beautiful? The schoolhouse is the children's home, and that home should be as attractive as anybody's home.

5. Is the building equipped with suitable desks?

6. Are agricultural, health and domestic science subjects given equal attention with geography and history?

7. How many boys are studying agriculture?

8. How many boys are enrolled in the Corn Club?

9. How many girls in Canning Club work?

10. Did the school take part in the last county commencement, or exhibit at the last county fair?

11. Is a compulsory attendance law enforced? If not, what proportion of the children are in average attendance? The tax-payers are paying to have all these children educated. Are you going to let them grow up in ignorance, to the hurt of themselves, and the community?

12. Do you have an annual commencement with certificates of award for pupils who have distinguished themselves in attendance or scholarship.—The Progressive Farmer.

ARTHUR BRIDGEMAN DIDN'T

WRITE THIS: HE'S ON THE NEW YORK JOURNAL.

From Howe's Monthly.

The New York American recently printed one of the best things I have ever seen in print.

"Not only at rulers are aimed the bombs and weapons of the anarchist," that paper says, "but at all civilization—the employer, the workman, the manufacturer, the sailor, the statesman, the street sweeper. Never by crime has the cause of civilization advanced. Murder has always retarded the progress of the world."

The strongest objection to Anarchy is that it is not for the best interests of the people. Our present system has its faults, but it is better than Anarchy. A few ruffians who can shoot quicker and talk better, than the general run, benefit by anarchy, but in Mexico, the poor man has been injured quite as much by it as the rich man. General Villa, who was a common thief and outlaw for twenty-two years, is living with a woman who is covered with diamonds, although he has a wife who is poor and neglected. Villa has been benefitted by revolution, but his followers have not been. I notice by the newspapers—God bless the newspapers for their important information—that Villa has recently purchased a thousand dollar bathtub; but the pennies are as dirty as ever; when they bathe they go down to the creek, use dirt instead of soap, and dry their bodies in the sun. To provide Villa with diamond-bedecked mattresses and thousand dollar bath tubs does not benefit the poor; it impoverishes them.

In Chicago lives a man who has made a fortune as the "business agent" of a union. He received $50 a week regularly, as a salary, but is worth several hundred thousand dollars earned on the side; he has an income of $30,000 a year from one building. He has been convicted of blackmail in connection with calling strikes, and twelve similar indictments are pending against him.

Thousands of honest workmen have been ordered out, without cause, and ordered back again after contractors "settled" with their "business agent."

In many cases, when contractors refused to be held up, there has been rioting and anarchy; thousands of honest workers have engaged in these things to oblige a corrupt leader, precisely as thousands of voters everywhere waste their time in shouting and marching, to oblige a cunning but corrupt leader.

No dull, honest man can afford Anarchy.

It is becoming easier every day for corrupt and cunning leaders to get we dull followers to marching, shouting, throwing stones, and beating our enemies, when we are three or four to one. Anarchy is becoming more respectable and popular; and unless we have a care, we will find the devil we have been looking for.

The prohibitionists have issued an awful warning to the country. They tell us that the man who drinks two beers a day spends the sum of $36.40 per year over a saloon bar. Awful! But we have been figuring ourselves and we have discovered that the man who drinks two lemonades a day spends the sum of $72.80 per year. Something should be done to keep men away from the ruinous cost of lemonades.

AMERICAN CRAZED BY

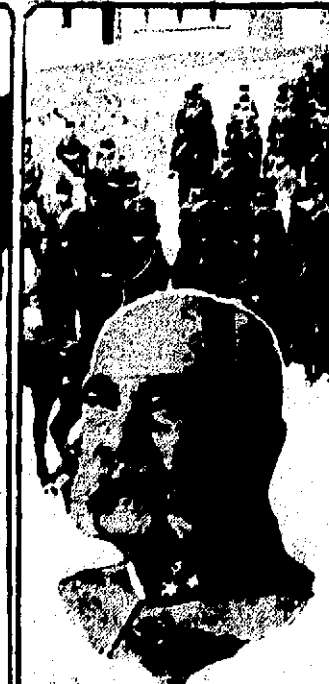

SCENES OF WAR

London, Aug. 8.—Mrs. Katherine Peck, of Minneapolis, was found today by the police wandering about with her mind deranged. She was hungry, although she had a large sum in paper and letters of credit in her purse. She is suffering from the effects of her journey across Germany, where she said she saw spies dragged from the trains to be shot. She now imagines she may be taken as a spy. She has been placed in a hospital for treatment.

Present Conflict Struggle For Supremacy Of Land, Sea And Air

The conflict now raging among the powers of Europe, promises not only to be a struggle for supremacy on land and sea but for supremacy in the air as well.

France, Russia and England will send their vast fleets against the giant Zeppelins of the Germans.

In a measure, the present European war will settle for all time the relative merits of the aeroplane and the dirigible balloon as engines of destruction. In the development of

Work on these is being rushed with all possible speed. They range from 150 to 525 feet in length, are equipped with motors giving from 350 to 420 horsepower, and carry light three inch guns which have been successfully fired in maneuvers. They speed through the air at the rate of forty to fifty miles an hour. All the Zeppelins are of the rigid type, the outer shell and framework being of aluminum construction. Inside the framework are the ability of the airship to keep aloft even with one or more of the bags punctured or otherwise out of commission.

Austria also has several rigid dirigibles and Italy has three or four. If Italy joins in with Germany and Austria, the Triple Alliance will have at its disposal 31 of this type of aircraft.

On the other hand England, Russia and France can muster 31 gas bag airships, but they are much smaller than the Zeppelins and are of the non-rigid or semi-rigid type.

The Triple Entente, formed by these three countries will pin their faith to their aeroplanes rather than to the balloons. It is estimated that the Entente has 1,250 aeroplanes against the 700 of the Alliance. France, especially, has developed the army aeroplane to a high state of efficiency and uses both the monoplane and the biplane, although the former predominates. For scouting work the monoplane has proved to be more successful because of the greater speed it can attain and the fewer chances of discovery by the enemy.

The Italian aviators are the only airmen who have received actual training in aerial warfare. The Italians successfully used aeroplanes in their campaign in Tripoli and also attained a certain measure of success with semi-rigid dirigibles.

England has one fast, though small dirigible attached to her navy. This is the Astra Torres IV, which recently made fifty-one miles an hour against a twelve mile wind. It is of the non-rigid type and can be deflated and put aboard a warship. The Vickers and Armstrong firms are now constructing two rigid airships for the British admiralty. These, when complete, will resemble the Zeppelins. England also has one naval Parseval, 270 feet long.

The Astra Torres is slightly smaller. There are also four other airships from 100 to 150 feet in length. France has 13 dirigibles attached to her army. These range from 275 to 525 feet in length. The Spiesse, the largest of the French fleet, is rigid. There is also under construction another Spiesse which will be 450 feet long.

Austria has but three airships in conditions for use, a collision about a month ago having destroyed one of the Austrian army balloons.

Little is known of the Russian dirigibles. She has thirteen small low speed craft. Like England and France, she has concentrated on the aeroplane.

Printer's Ink to Make You Think

By HOLLAND.

MILLIONS of dollars are spent in this country every year to promote thinking. You are induced to think on all sorts of subjects at a vast expenditure of money. Some concerns want you to think about clothes, others want you to study the question of breakfast foods, while others want you to investigate the cure of the teeth and think what sort of paste, powder or liquid wash is best for preserving them.

Advertising is the method by which these men are inducing you to think. They know that if you begin to think you will insist on the best, and each advertiser knows that his goods possess real merit. He knows it would not pay him to advertise something that would not stand the hard test of actual use.

If you will do the thinking the aim of the advertiser has been achieved, for you will in time try his goods. That is all he wants—just a trial. He will then depend on the goods to make a favorable impression. Advertising merely interests—makes you think.

SPORTS

By Frank G. Menke.

New York, Aug. 19.—Those who are of the opinion that a ball player can detect nothing but the way to the paymaster's window, and the dining room entrance will be surprised to know what Geo. McQuillen and Alex McCarthy of Pittsburgh did in this town on the occasion of their recent visit.

They caught a crook.

Not knowing what else to do with the evening in question, George and Alex who pitch and play second base for the Pirates when not slenching, wandered down to the police headquarters to hold commune with the visible forms thereabouts. George and Alex, being law-abiding citizens, have even become chummy with certain members of the force, and during the early part of the evening they discussed pro and con as to which job was the easier—pollicing or ball playing.

In due course of time an Englishman named Adams catapaulted into the station house.

"I've been robbed," he shrieked. "They've taken $4,500 from me. I've been swindled."

Adams was led into the rogues' gallery where they kept a reserve stock of photographs of confidence men. Adams pawed over a hundred or so, and then, waving one in the air, shouted: "That's 'im, the bloomin' crook. That's 'im what stole my money. Up and at 'im boys!"

McQuillen and McCarthy had trailed along with the party and were among those present when Adams discovered the picture of the man who flimmed him of his roll via the old wire tapping scheme.

"That guy usually hangs around men whom Adams later identified as Chas. Towns," remarked one of the

"Does, hey?" quoth McQuillen. "Guess we'll go out and hunt him up. Come along, Alex."

Alex did. The pair of ball players did quite a bit of hunting. As the hour approached midnight it looked as if their looking would be in vain. But you know how such stories usually end. It was the very last place in which this pair of Smoke City sleuths decided to look that McQuillen spotted a fellow, leaning up against a bar, contentedly blowing foam off a glass of beer.

"Hist," hissed McQuillen.

Together the pair withdrew from the entrance for a conference.

"Hunt up a copper quick, Alex," whispered George. "I'll shadow this guy until you get back. Hustle!"

Alex in the due course of time caught up with a pair of officers and somewhat against their will and judgment practically dragged them back to where McQuillen, through a crack in the door was watching his quarry.

The plain clothes men at McQuillen's direction, walked up to the beer sipper, gave him the up and down from several different angles and then, as one laid a heavy hand upon the beer drinker's shoulder the other said: "Come along. You're pinched."

It is usual in stories concerning amateur sleuths to have it discovered after the suspect is led into police headquarters, despite his frantic protests, that instead of being a crook, shoplifter or something equally naughty, that he's mayor of the town, the choir-master or the retired chief of police. But this story is the man that McQuillen spotted was a real crook with a long police record, a confidence man known to the police of many cities and the man who flimmed him of his roll via the old wire tapping scheme.

"That guy usually hangs around men whom Adams later identified as Chas. Towns," remarked one of the

BETTER PAINT.

Better paint this year. If your property needs it. Mistaken men have been waiting for paint to come down. The cost of their job has gone up not down; it always goes up by waiting; never comes down.

Better paint than Devco? There isn't any.

Suppose one had waited 20 or 30 years ago for a better paint than Devco; how long would he have waited? How long would he still have to wait?

The price a gallon makes some difference; yes, but not much; it's the paint that counts; the quality counts.

It's the go-for that counts. Protection of property that counts more yet.

Better paint.

LONDON BANKS AGAIN GIVE GOLD FOR PAPER

A FALSE STANDARD OF CULTURE

has gained ground in this century which looks upon the bearing and rearing of children as something coarse and vulgar and to be avoided, but the advent of Eugenics means much for the motherhood of the race. Happy is the wife who, though weak and ailing, depends upon Lydia E. After seeing the noisy clothes a girl can purchase out of her $7 per week we are inclined to feel thankful that she doesn't get $70 per week.

BUSINESS MEN OF WEST VIRGINIA FORSPE IM- PROVEMENT IN BUSINESS UNDER PROHIBITION

From Union Signal.

Mr. W. G. Baldwin, the head of the Baldwin-Felts Detective Agency, which has to do largely with the enforcement of law and the preservation of order in the mining sections of Virginia, West Virginia, and Tennessee, is authority for the statement that the business men of West Virginia not only believe that business will not suffer as a result of prohibition, but on the contrary, realize that the mines and other enterprises operating with large forces, will be greatly helped by having the temptation to drink liquor removed from operatives.

In this connection it is interesting to learn that the mayor of Clarkburg, West Virginia, on July 20, reduced his police force to three men, explaining his action by the statement that since the prohibition amendment became effective there had been only one arrest for drunkenness and very few for other offenses.

Detective Baldwin travels all over Virginia and is sanguine of an overwhelming victory for the dry forces. "I put the majority of the people of Virginia for prohibition," said the white-haired terror of the law breakers, "at 42,500. I have been asked why I hit upon these odd figures. My reply is that West Virginia gave over 52,000 majority and I think certain Virginia will do half as well."

"THE RAINY DAY"

(By Lee Wallace in the Denver Post)

Sudden the earth with the conscious rain,
And laden gray the sky—
A drifter sudden and down at heel,
And laden-spirited, I.

Oh, but it only was yesterday
The cherry sun shone bright,
And, wild and free as the wind, my heart
Was cheerful and reckless and light.

Some looked askance and fung advice,
"Lay by for a rainy day,"
But I laughed and answered, "The roses fade—Gather them while ye may!"

Yet they were right, and I was wrong —Too wilfully blind to see—
And now, thru the rain I watch
Their lights
Twinkle in mockery.

For I am the fool that tempted Fate
By playing it all one way—
Oh, Luck may run for a long time straight,
But the Jade will switch some day.
